PRESENTED BY DR. TOM BLACK

Summary

Since the arrival of Covid-19, society has seen a rapid shift in how people work, go to school, and interact with each other. Therapists were not immune to that shift and our ethics continue to be challenged in new ways. This workshop addresses ethical issues therapists are currently confronting or may confront in the future pertaining to the increased use of technology in our profession. This workshop will examine our current ethical climate and the increasing engagement of those seeking help, other professionals, and family members in the digital space.

Learning Objectives

- Describe digital technology and summarize several popular sites and services
- Identify the ethical challenges that may arise from engaging in activities on the internet
- Appraise use of email, record keeping, and mobile computing devices Construct social media and digital therapeutics policy for clinicians' practice
- Discuss relevant ethical issues of therapists' websites, digital presence, and social networking profiles
